Bell Flavors and Fragrances - Northbrook Business of the Year

The Northbrook Business of the Year is honored for excellent business practices

Anyone who has ever bitten into a caramel, sprinkled baby powder on an infant, lit a scented candle, enjoyed a flavored soft drink, or even fed their pet a treat, has benefited from a Bell Flavors and Fragrances product. These are just a few examples of the 10,000 flavors and fragrances that Northbrook based Bell has developed in its impressive 100 plus year history.

Headquartered in Northbrook since 1981, the company is known not only for its innovation and research, but for its customer service and tremendous growth. Because "a taste or scent is the fingerprint of a product," according to President Jim Heinz, Bell develops personal relationships with each of its customers, for whom products have to be individually formulated. The company's manufacturing facilities maintain 7,000 flavors, each with a different formula specific to the requirements of each of its 3,000 customers in the food, beverage, cosmetic, household care, and personal care companies. The fact that it can respond to orders in a matter of days also makes it stand out from its competitors and has led to Bell's growth and success.

It all began in 1912 when the company's namesake and founder William Bell, a creative flavor chemist, began selling his flavors to local ice cream parlors, grocery stores and soda pop shops. With 400 candy companies in Chicago, he expanded the business with a focus on the confectionary market. Bell developed the first flavorings for caramels and marshmallows, formulas which are still used today. In 1968 chemist Edward Heinz purchased the William Bell Company, re-energizing the company by

A Message from the Chamber President

One of my favorite events of the year is our Annual Meeting and Dinner. It's a celebratory evening with a terrific speaker and the official introduction of our dedicated Board. But for me, the highlight is always the recognition of our well deserving business award winners. From the nomination all the way through selection process, a lot of consideration goes into the accomplishments and contributions of so many of our businesses.

I appreciate the fact that at our Annual Meeting, we can stop for a moment and reflect on these businesses and their rich history. But our celebration goes deeper than accolades and tributes for two companies. It draws attention to the importance of all of our businesses and their critical contributions to our community -- the tax dollars they generate that make Northbrook strong, funds that go towards paving our roads, supporting our schools, and supplying critical services. By focusing on our award winners, it's really an opportunity to shine the spotlight on the entire business community, take pride in their accomplishments and reflect on all that they do for us.

This year's winners are two remarkable family owned businesses whose origins not only date back over a century, but who have made a commitment to our community. One is easily identified by their trucks driving around the North Shore with the familiar giant red Z. The other operates quietly in a somewhat less visible location in the Sky Harbor Business Park. Both have chosen Northbrook as their corporate headquarters and invested not only in their physical locations, but also in our local workforce. They each have long standing Chamber memberships -- one dating back over 50 years. And they each engage on a level that demonstrates their commitment to the organization.

Member participation and engagement was one of the topics of discussion at the Chamber's first Board meeting this year. Focusing on our relationships with our members and retaining them is a critical and ongoing goal for us. The Chamber works hard to offer excellent marketing, networking, educational and advocacy benefits for its members. We will be reaching out throughout the year, encouraging everyone to take advantage of all that we have to offer. As always, I am happy to discuss with any member how the Chamber can help them meet their goals.

As you can see from this newsletter we have an action packed month! I encourage you to sign up for a program, and especially consider joining us for the Annual Meeting and Dinner!

Chamber Gearing up For 2017-2018 Community Guide

The Chamber is pleased to announce that it is again partnering with The Northbrook Tower to produce the 2017/2018 Community Resource Guide. As in the past, this four-color guide will feature comprehensive information about Northbrook, including demographics and statistics. The guide is a handy reference for anyone seeking information on Village government and services, schools, recreation, civic and social groups and includes a two page calendar of events in Northbrook. The publication will also include the summer Shopping and Dining Guide as an insert in the publication as an added feature for our residents and businesses.

The Guide will be direct mailed to all homes and businesses in Northbrook, with an initial distribution of over 16,500. In addition, 4,000 Guides will be circulated throughout the year at Chamber events and by hotels, large corporations, real estate agents, civic organizations, the Library and numerous businesses in the community. Affordable advertising in the Guide is exclusive to Chamber members. For information consult ascend through the ranks of the retail industry.

Woodward joined Crate and Barrel in August 2015 and in his position oversees all aspects of merchandising for Crate and Barrel. He is tasked with leading the growth and development of the company's multi-channel presentation of home furnishings through its stores and direct-to-consumer channels. Woodward's responsibilities include sourcing, product design and assortment selection for the home furnishings giant, which operates more than 100 stores in the US and Canada and 19 international franchise locations around the world.

Before joining Crate and Barrel, Woodward served as Senior Vice President of Fossil Inc. where he helped grow and develop the company's portfolio of licensed brands for top luxury retailers, including the rollout of Michael Kors watch and jewelry on a global scale. Prior to Fossil, he was the Executive VP and General Merchandise Manager for the Bombay Company, a specialty retailer that designs, sources and markets a unique line of home accessories and furniture. He was also CEO and on the board of directors for Illuminations, a national privately owned boutique, and Vice President of Pier 1 Imports.

Woodward has a passion for home design/architecture and recently completed his 19th custom designed home. He currently is residing in Northbrook.

Crate and Barrel, an industry-leading home furnishings specialty retailer was founded in 1962 as a family business. It was among the first to introduce affordable household goods and contemporary home decor to American consumers. An extensive furniture collection was introduced more than 35 years ago. The company has grown from its first factory warehouse store in downtown Chicago, and now operates stores throughout the U.S. and Canada offering shopping and shipping to customers in most major North American Markets. Its corporate headquarters is in Northbrook.

Additional information about Woodward's presentation will be included in the March newsletter.

focusing on its original tenets of creative flavor development and unparalleled customer service. From there, the company's domestic growth took off.

In 1979, following the purchase of a fragrance company, the company name was changed to Bell Flavors and Fragrances. Two years later Bell purchased the flavor division of Stepan Chemical Company and moved the company headquarters from Melrose Park to Northbrook. Shortly thereafter, Bell acquired Synfleur, Nestle's flavor and fragrance division, manufacturer of the scent for Johnson and Johnson baby powder. The company grew to include two more manufacturing plants in New York and a research and development division in New Jersey.

With the passing of Edward Heinz in 1987, sons Jim, Raymond and Reb Heinz continued with their vision of growing and expanding the company. In 1993 Bell acquired Schimmel and Co. in Leipzig, Germany, considered the world's first flavor and fragrance company, complete with the 35,000 volume Schimmel Library, the oldest and largest chemical library in the world. In the same year, the company purchased a 100,000 square foot manufacturing plant in Middletown, New York to manufacture fragrances and botanicals for North American customers.

Between 1995 and 2009 the company grew its footprint around the world with acquisitions in various Canadian locations, Hong Kong, Guadalajara, Mexico, Shanghai, China and Sao Paulo, Brazil. This allowed for expansion into the beverage, confectionary, dairy and savory industries.

All of this domestic and international growth was accompanied by further expansions at the Northbrook headquarters, which quadrupled its footprint and the number of employees between 1981 and 2016. Just last year, Bell began a 15,000 square foot expansion and 5,000 square foot renovation of its 80,000 square foot main building and purchased the building behind the property. The $5 million investment in the new space paved the way for a new dry blend area, the installation of a new laboratory for the development of fragrances and the addition of a new culinary center complete with a presentation kitchen.

Looking back, Jim Heinz can recall when his father purchased the company with three full time employees and himself and a handful of others who worked part time. The company now has seven worldwide manufacturing plants, R & D operations in ten countries, sales offices in 40 countries, 275 employees in Northbrook and 1,200 employees worldwide. It's now the largest US family owned global flavor and fragrance company, and ranked among the top 15 flavor and fragrance companies in the world.

Already plans are underway for future international growth. But the operations will always be tied to its Northbrook headquarters according to Jim. "The company grew up here -- it's been headquartered here for one third of its life. We know our customers appreciate working with someone who has a local presence but wields global capabilities."

Bell Flavors will donate its $500 honorarium to St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital.

A.W. Zengeler Cleaners, Corporate Citizen of the Year

The Corporate Citizen of the Year is recognized for promoting a spirit of giving and community involvement.

After opening its doors in Chicago nearly 160 years ago, little did the founders of family owned A.W. Zengeler Cleaners ever imagine the impact their dry cleaning company would have. Established by John Zengeler in 1857, the company has grown from a steam and dye works business to Illinois' largest and one of America's oldest and largest family owned dry cleaning businesses, operating a central plant, two package plants, and eight stores, including its headquarters in Northbrook, with over 150 employees.

One of the hallmarks of the family-owned company, passed down from generation to generation five times over, is service to the community. Zengeler has found traditional as well as creative ways over the years to give back to the communities it serves. As a sign of its commitment to its neighbors, the Zengeler website homepage and building marquis signs always feature news about its charitable events and activities.

Among its many charities, Zengeler is best known for its partnership for the last 16 years with the Glass Slipper Project, a Chicago based charity. Both organizations work hard to transform the dream of attending Senior Prom into reality for thousands of northern Illinois high school young women by providing gowns, shoes and accessories to those who cannot afford them. Over the years, Zengeler's involvement has grown exponentially and is now almost synonymous with the event.

Zengeler not only collects the used gowns from donors, but inspects, repairs, and cleans each dress, all at no cost to anyone. The Zengeler stores also take on the responsibility of storing the items on site. Every year fifth generation owner, Tom Zengeler, often accompanied by one of his daughters, delivers thousands of gowns and other items in several vans to the boutiques that are held for the young women to shop during prom season. The program has been so successful that it's become a year -round project.

Over the years the number of dresses collected has grown from several hundred a year, to several thousand, and last year a record 5,287 dresses were collected. Since partnering with the Glass Slipper project, Zengeler has collected in total over 44,000 dresses valued at almost $22 million. Estimates are that over 3,000 students every year benefit from this generosity.

Zengeler's involvement has had a ripple effect in the community as well. "The impact from the Glass Slipper Project touches so many in a positive way that each year, we receive inquiries from other schools and businesses asking how they can also support this cause," comments Tom Zengeler. Numerous area high schools, including Glenbrook North have started their own collection drives, pitching in to help Zengeler out.

The Zengeler family also has strong ties to Rotary, a worldwide organization known for providing humanitarian services. Fourth generation family member Bob Zengeler, who in his 80s still works full time at the Libertyville store, helped found Libertyville Rotary 50 years ago.

Tom Zengeler, great, great grandson of the original founder of the company is a charter member of the Libertyville Rotary Sunrise. Since it was founded in 1987, he has never missed a meeting. A few years ago, he spearheaded the annual "Coats for Vets" project. In 2016 alone 4,128 coats, gloves and scarves and other winter clothing valued at $400,000 were collected, cleaned, repaired and delivered to the hospital on Veterans Day last November.

But Zengeler's commitment and interest in the community extends beyond just one or two favored charities. With locations throughout the North Shore in addition to Northbrook, their record of charitable contributions includes numerous financial donations to worthy organizations in each of their towns. In Northbrook alone, Zengeler supports Northbrook Days, Northbrook Action baseball and the Northbrook Hockey League, Northbrook Rotary, Northbrook Days, the Northbrook Symphony Orchestra, Fourth of July and the Northbrook Women's Club Foundation. A member of the Chamber since opening their doors in Northbrook over 50 years ago, Zengeler is also a consistent supporter of the organization, annually supporting the Golf Outing and Auction and Taste.

"Our commitment to help our neighbors is an extremely important part of our rich history and our legacy" comments Tom Zengeler. "Just as we take pride in our state of the art business, we believe strongly in the importance of giving back wherever and whenever we can."

Zengeler will donate its $500 honorarium to The Northbrook Historical Society.

Volunteer of the Year is selected for consistently helping the Chamber achieve its goals.

At almost every Chamber networking event, program, fundraiser and volunteer meeting, you're likely to see Paul Kaufmann working quietly in the background, taking it all in and assessing if there is any way he can help. before a program, or at an off-site event or fundraiser.

Paul Kaufmann's impact goes beyond merely attendance, however. At a networking event serving as an Ambassador, he can always be counted on to help a new or prospective member feel more welcome. At a volunteer meeting, he listens carefully to the goals and objectives, assessing what is needed, steps up to help out and is known to reliably follow through. When there is a last minute need for assistance, he is consistently the go-to person everyone looks for.

"I've had the opportunity to work with Paul on numerous volunteer committees," comments Bob Caldwell, Hallmark Homecare. "His contributions are always valued and his dependability is unsurpassed. His award is well deserved."

Paul's involvement and commitment to help out the Chamber started over four years ago when he attended his first networking event. After an extensive career ranging from commercial real estate to residential development and construction, consulting and even flight instruction, he was looking to build his new Northbrook based document destruction business. Not sure where to turn, he was led to the Chamber by numerous colleagues and even customers who urged him to check the organization out. He immediately joined the Chamber, realizing the value of attendance and involvement, and quickly enjoyed becoming known as the Chamber's "shredding guy" and watching his business grow. In turn, he helps out and often refers the many Chamber members he has come to know so well.

Hoping to give back to the organization that helped him so much, Paul began volunteering to help with the Golf Outing and Auction and Taste. "Getting involved is enjoyable as you get to know and work with like minded people," he comments.

He was then tapped to be a Chamber Ambassador, helping others to navigate networking events and benefit in the same ways he has over the years. "I enjoy helping newcomers and hope they can learn from my experience that the more they give to the organization the more they will get out of it."

Paul finds the Northbrook Chamber much more welcoming and supportive than some of his other professional associations. "It really is a remarkable organization with great camaraderie. Giving back to an organization that helps so many of us is just something we all should do," he says.

Paul's involvement with the Chamber has fostered even further interest in volunteering in the community. He also donates time to the Northbrook Civic Foundation and Northbrook Days as well as The Hunger Resource Network, and lately helped found an informal group of Chamber volunteers who are helping the Chicago homeless.

"Knowing all that the Chamber offers members and does for the community, I tell everyone it's an easy thing to volunteer. Plus it's often a lot of fun."
