

Springfield Update: Illinois Moves to Raise Minimum Wage

In the wake of election campaign promises, Illinois legislators used an unusually fast track to push through a statewide minimum wage increase. A bill to raise the minimum wage for most employees to $15 by 2025 passed both houses of the General Assembly in February. At press time Governor Pritzker was expected to quickly sign it into law.

The bill passed by both the Senate and house increases the minimum wage to $9.25 beginning January 1, 2020, followed by annual increases culminating in a $15 wage in 2025. Businesses with 50 or fewer full-time employees are eligible for a credit to ease the burden of the increase, but the credit is reduced at the start of 2021.

A sub-minimum wage will still be available for workers under 18, maxing out at $13 in 2025. The new law also preserves a tip credit for restaurants. The bill does not contain any regional differences in wages, a strategy that was promoted by some suburban and downstate business groups.

Northbrook officials have closely watched developments in Springfield, in response to local voters' support in the last election for a minimum wage increase. The Village opted out of Cook County's wage increase ordinance in 2017, reflecting

Village Board Candidates Combine Experience with New Voices

When they go to the polls on April 2, Northbrook voters will find three uncontested candidates for seats on the Village Board of Trustees. Selected at a Northbrook Caucus town meeting last December, the three candidates include a veteran Trustee and two newcomers, each of whom will bring a mix of professional experience and community involvement to their positions.

The Chamber asked each candidate the following questions:

- What is your vision for Northbrook in the next ten years, and how does the business community fit into that vision?
- What inspired you to run for the Board, and what are your top goals as a Trustee?

The following profiles reflect their responses as well as a summary of their personal and professional backgrounds.

Johannah Hebl Johannah "JoJo" Hebl began her involvement with local government at the grassroots level, as a resident working with her neighbors to draw attention to a problem. A few years after she moved to Northbrook in 2004, her street experienced flooding and property damage. Hebl went door-to-door to film the impact of flooding on neighbors' homes and interviewed drivers as they tried to get through the waterlogged streets. She sent her videos to the Village Board, and also organized others to attend Board meetings with her.

"I initially became interested in local politics because I did not believe Northbrook was properly investing in our infrastructure," recalls Hebl. "Through the determination of my neighbors and other impacted citizens, we were able to motivate our leaders to take action."

Hebl's efforts led to her appointment to Northbrook's Stormwater Commission in 2009 where she participated in the development of the comprehensive stormwater plan, leading to a number of landmark projects to alleviate flood risks. "I was encouraged that we were able to accomplish this action through collective cooperation," she notes. "I believe that collaboration among government, citizens and the business community results in the best solutions."

After two terms on the Stormwater Commission, Hebl joined the Village Plan Commission in 2017. The position gave her a broader perspective on how development and zoning shape the community. She felt a strong imperative "to balance the interests of developers and residents to make sure that any zoning variance is best for our community as a whole."

Hebl predicts, "I believe that we will see an increase in density throughout Northbrook" in the next ten years, "but also specifically in the downtown area. With the increased density, I believe Northbrook will continue to be an excellent choice for residents and businesses to put down roots.”

“The business community will be an integral part of the growth and development of the future of Northbrook,” she continues.

In addition to her Commission experience, Hebl has been involved in a number of local organizations including the Chamber. Professionally, she is an attorney with Matlin Law Group specializing in estate planning. Her legal work has made her sensitive to the needs of senior residents and their families.

Hebl has a number of policy goals to pursue on the Board. “I would like to see Northbrook be a leader on the environmental challenges that face us and future generations. I would like increased transparency with our business community and to see some processes streamlined. Finally, I would like to recruit a next generation of Northbrook residents to get involved at a civic level.”

Robert Israel Incumbent Trustee Robert Israel sees tangible links between the vitality of the Village and the ways we travel within it. Through his work as a Chief Civil Engineer with TranSmart/EJM Corporation, he has a depth of knowledge about transportation systems ranging from local roads to tollways and mass transit networks. At the same time, he has a passion for pedestrian and bicycle traffic, which he believes brings people closer while also supporting the environment.

A resident for over 20 years, Israel first became involved in local government in 1999 as a member of the Stormwater Management Commission. He continued in that role until 2011, contemporaneously serving on the Comprehensive Plan Advisory Committee and the Bicycle Task Force.

Elected to the Village Board for four-year terms in 2011 and 2015, Israel has continued to contribute with an emphasis on topics that reflect his expertise. He has chaired or participated in Board committees for Community and Sustainability, Public Works, and Administration and Finance, and currently serves as Chair of the Ad-Hoc Facilities and Public Works Committee. He also maintains an interest in the Senior Services and Pedestrian/Bike Commissions.

His view of Northbrook’s future combines redevelopment with enhanced facilities and strategic planning to support the community’s needs.

“In the next ten years, I see continued development of the bike/ped plan along with the Skokie Valley trail, allowing cyclists to safely access our downtown.... I see people making use of transportation alternatives,” to commute to work in or out of Northbrook, says Israel. “My overarching goal is to foster a vibrant Village that benefits from the contributions and presence of our businesses and our residents.”

To achieve that vision, Israel describes three immediate priorities. First, he focuses on improving the Village’s infrastructure, pointing to progress made in flood management and water system operations. Second, he will continue the Ad-Hoc Facilities Committee’s decision-making process for renovation or replacement of the police station, fire station #11, and the public works garage. Finally, he aims to encourage the “balanced redevelopment” of downtown with steps to support pedestrian/bike activity and opportunities to engage people in residential, retail, artistic, and community celebration settings.

“I believe that our business community is integral to the health of the Village and central to the sustainability of our community,” says Israel. “I will continue my work to make opportunities for our businesses, visitors, and residents to love this Village as I do.”

Heather Ross Although a newcomer to elected politics, attorney Heather Ross draws on a long history of professional experience and civic activism. She combines an entrepreneurial perspective, as a founder of the law firm Ross & Zuckerman, LLP, with an interest in social causes and advocacy.

“My experience practicing law in a collaborative legal field along with years of civic and non-profit advocacy work has enabled me to develop strong negotiation and mediation skills,” she explains. “I have also established budgets for both start-up entities (including my law firm) and well-established not-for-profit groups, and have spent over two decades involved in developing policy and educational programming.”

Ross began her career as a lawyer at the Chicago firm Chapman & Cutler, LLP in the municipal finance department. She later

Village Explores Public/Private Partnership for Northbrook Court Project

Possible changes to Northbrook Court have captivated public attention in recent months. Brookfield Properties, the shopping center's owner, and residential developer Ryan Companies have proposed a dramatic reimagining of the western end of the center: the demolition of Macy's making way for new retail, restaurants, a supermarket, public open space, and a 315-unit luxury apartment complex. Costs for the project are estimated at $250 million. To offset part of that hefty price tag, discussions are underway to consider a public/private partnership including $21.5 million in tax increment financing (TIF) and an additional $5.5 million in partial sales tax rebates. How do these public financing mechanisms work, and why would the Village want to participate?

As Village President Sandy Frum noted in her State of the Village address, Northbrook Court is an essential element to the health of the Village, as the source of 25% of sales tax revenue generated for Northbrook. The status of Northbrook Court also impacts the well-being of neighboring businesses and residential property values. Tax increment financing is a funding strategy that helps local governments attract private development, without increasing property taxes. Municipalities can create a TIF district within which the assessed valuation of taxable real estate is frozen at the adoption of the TIF. Then, for a set number of years, taxing bodies -- the Village, school districts, park district, and other entities

-- continue to receive revenue based on that set valuation. Growth in property tax revenues in the TIF District above the "base" valuation is put into a separate fund, maintained by the Village to pay for public investments and redevelopment costs within the TIF District.

Separate from the TIF, the proposed sales tax rebate of $5.5 million will have a built-in protection of the Village's existing tax base. The Village will first determine the current tax base at Northbrook Court for sales tax generation, and will also calculate increased costs in Village services (such as police and fire protection) connected to the new development. The sales tax rebate would only apply on amounts above the existing tax base and the predetermined municipal service increment.

In January, the TIF District proposal was referred for consideration to a Joint Review Board of interested taxing bodies. A public hearing will be held at the Village Board Meeting on April 9. Meanwhile, the Plan Commission is working separately on elements of the proposal under its jurisdiction.

Dundee Road Construction Starting in April

As winter transitions slowly to spring, Northbrook drivers and businesses prepare themselves for the inevitable challenges of summer road construction. For 2019, the biggest traffic disruption is expected to be the closure of Dundee Road, lasting up to six months. As of mid-February, Village officials expect the construction project to begin April 10.

The Dundee Road project involves the replacement of a culvert bridge and road surface where Lee Road meets Dundee. Under the jurisdiction of the Illinois Dept. of Transportation (IDOT), the $6.5 million project will require the closure of Dundee between Waukegan Road and Skokie Boulevard, except for limited access to residences and businesses within the closure. Through traffic will be directed to use a detour route connecting Waukegan and Skokie via Lake Cook Road.

Barely visible to drivers, the culvert covers the Middle Fork of the North Branch of the Chicago River. Built in 1938, the existing bridge has been declared as functionally obsolete and structurally deficient by IDOT. Construction on a replacement was planned for 2018, but utility adjustments connected to the project forced the main work to be delayed. The new bridge will allow for larger, heavier vehicles and include a ten foot wide multi-use path to accommodate bicycles and pedestrians. Approximately 40,000 cars a day drive along the stretch of the road.

To stay informed about the status of local road construction, check the Village's website at www.Northbrook.il.us/ConstructionProjects. You can also sign up for notifications by email or text message at www.Northbrook.il.us/NotifyMe.

concern that higher costs in border communities like Northbrook would place local employers at an unfair disadvantage and drive business to Lake County. Since then, wage increase activists have sought a reversal of that decision at several Board meetings.

Village Trustees indicated in December that an increase at the statewide level will be relevant to any reconsideration of the Cook County increase. Meanwhile, the Cook County minimum wage will rise from $11 to $12 as of July 1, with annual increases to come.

Business owners are encouraged to share their views on minimum wage increases with their elected officials.

joined the Legal Assistance Foundation of Metropolitan Chicago, representing low-income clients in various civil matters. Concurrently she served as director of the Woman's Law Project, providing educational outreach and advocacy on behalf of low-wage working women.

Ross moved to Northbrook in 2005, and in the same year launched her law firm specializing in the legal issues surrounding reproductive technologies and alternative family building. She was chosen to chair the American Society for Reproductive Medicine's Legal Professional Group, a leadership position experience that she sees as useful to a Trustee.

"As Chairwoman, I developed budgets, initiated education programs, and spoke on panels for this national and international organization," she notes.

Ross was inspired to run for the Village Board by her personal involvement in local groups supporting, among other measures, the concealed weapon ban and opting into the Cook County sick leave and minimum wage ordinances. In her statement to the Northbrook Caucus, she stressed the importance of transparency in Board operations and "fostering good will between and among citizens and the Board."

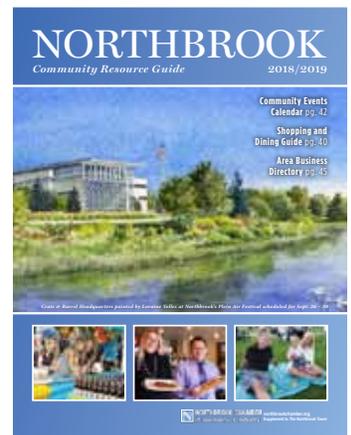

Ross describes a number of priorities she sees as important for the Board, including responsible development, enhancements to the downtown area, community vibrancy, and environmental issues. These broad areas of concern shape her vision of Northbrook's next decade.

"I believe the development of Northbrook Court, Green Acres, and the Grainger property will result in more housing and increased business opportunities," comments Ross. "I envision Northbrook as an environmentally conscious community, welcoming to a diverse culture of people and businesses. As Northbrook develops, collaboration with the business community is essential, and I look forward to working with the Chamber and all of the businesses in Northbrook during my term as a Trustee."
